Blast is a tool designed to test the connections to a specific server on a network. It performs many types of tests, such as ping, nmap scan, brute force, and automatic dictionary attacks. Download Link: Blast needs to be installed separately for every machine you want to test. Blast needs to run in the background for one to two hours, so a network diagram with all of the network components and systems involved is necessary. This is the most powerful and is the best of the bunch. It also uses the deepest amount of resources, and doesn't work so well on short-term connections. Still a powerful tool. Some of its flaws include being unable to send ICMP echo requests, basic brute force and dictionary attack tools that are more suited to using the netcat program, and a few file-transfer tests that may fail. Price: $35.00 Fiverr is the first and most reliable way for every user to earn money. You can earn money with Fiverr by selling your own products or service.
