The local tissue reaction to the wound is an inflammatory cascade which involves the complement and coagulation systems, cytokine networks, the fibrinolytic system, and cell migration. Local debridement is performed in an attempt to eradicate infective organisms and to initiate the wound healing process. Therefore the choice of technique is related to the type of wound and the available resources. The most common indications for local wound debridement include acute wounds, chronic wounds, burn wounds, diabetic ulcers, pressure sores, and venous stasis ulcers. The choice of local wound debridement technique is still a matter of individual preference and local availability. Here, we go. is that those people get to have another two years of going from one extreme to another. It really doesn't matter what you mean by "retirement", it really doesn't matter what your lifestyle choices are, it really doesn't matter whether you are saving or spending. There will always be a population on the lower end of that spectrum and a population on the higher end of that spectrum. For those that have a combination of the two, the official retirement age at 65 is a convenient way for the government to cut taxes, for all the reasons I've mentioned, but I find it a disturbing trend. As a side note, I'm not big on the "government" as a solution to anything, but, if you are tired of the takers and spenders in the current system, you need to look at the potential for lower taxes. It's possible in the states, you need to look at the potential for charter schools or home schooling, it's certainly possible in the states and in the countries where it's the norm. Ronbot 04-28-2011, 06:26 PM That does not mean it will come to pass in most cases. I don't think most folks have truly considered the ramifications of the millenium generation coming of age. A couple of points I would like to make: 1. What people are unaware of is how many people do not wish to spend their retirement years living in a log cabin in the woods. To most of us, "retirement" means a comfortable life, but for some it means living like a king/queen! 2. People are aware of the retirement issue, but few of us truly understand the ramifications of being unable to work in the'real world' because you are not physically or mentally able to be employed. 3. More of a threat than the retirement issue is the fact that the number of
